November 15, 2009

In this book, when I talk about the emerging church I am referring, in a general sense, to congregations that are meeting the challenges of the postmodern world with creativity and vitality. An emerging congregation, by my definition, is one that is always looking out at the horizon for the future that desires to be born through them. They are aware that the Spirit-driven universe is evolving in and through their common life together. These congregations view their own co-creative capacity as a sign that the Spirit is active in their midst.

Oh, sisters, let's go down, come on down, down in the river to pray. OPENING PRAYER

God be with you.

And also with you.

Let us pray: (The congregation remains standing.)

You bid us welcome to this holy place, gracious God,
and we are very grateful.

We bring with us this day delicious laughter and honest tears;
shards of grief, and life-giving joy.

Remove from us all that gets in the way of worship that is life-giving and holy, grace-filled and good.

Weave into the fabric of this hour the gift of your Spirit,
that in our song and in our silence,
in our prayer and in our praise,
we may begin to recognize your presence among us,
in the Spirit of Jesus. (silent personal reflection)
